Excerpt: . . . accuse ones self. To be let bloud, when one is in health, is a signal for a sickness to come. An anticipated excuse awakens a discontent that slept. A Prudent Man ought not to seem sensible of anothers suspicion, because that is to court his resentment. He ought oftely endeavour to cure that suspicion by a sincere and civil deportment. J. . . MAXIME CCXLVII. to knovo d little htore, and to live a little-less. ; y Others on the contrary fay, that ho nest leisure is better than much business. . Nothing is ours, but time, which even they, who haVe no fixt habitation enjoy. It is an equal misfortune to employ the pretious time of life in mechanical exercises, or in the hurry of great affairs. One is not to load himself neither with business, nor envy. Thats to live, and yet...
