Excerpt: . . . impossible to fill up; and its result was an apathetic indifference to every passing event. Fainter and fainter grew every effort at cheerfulness; listless and unhappy, her pale countenance was too faithful an indication of the knowing ravages of the worm at her heart; which, having already consumed her spirits, Charles shuddered as he beheld her health and faculties also becoming its prey. Time, he had hoped, would gradually efface every painful recollection; but Emily, alas! alike untutored in the school of adversity, and habitually and wilfully blind to the only true source of consolation, had no idea beyond yielding herself up to her own overpowering feelings; whilst her brother, aware of this, bitterly and deeply deplored it. One evening she sat alone in the library. He entered; and, placing himself in a chair opposite to her Emily, he said, with some hesitation, you...
